AYURVEDIC MASSAGE TRAINING COURSE IN PUDUCHERRY- INDIA (Indian “well-being” massage with oil)

Ayurveda means “knowledge of life”. According to Indian thinking it is based on a unitary concept of the individual.

The origin of Ayurveda’s literature goes back to Vedic scripture particularly “The Samkya” one of the Indian philosophical systems, “Darshana”.

“Purusha” is the male principle, shapeless, beyond features, immutable knower, not taking part in the manifestation.

“Prakriti” is the female principle, the Shakti who creates all forms of manifested life. She is the cosmic energy containing the three tendencies “the Gunas”:

Sattva: light, joy, revelation

Rajas: movement, impetus, change

Tamas: inertia, lethargy, obscurity

These three Gunas are the foundations of all creation. They are maintained in a dynamic balance in Prakriti. When this balance is disrupted there is an attempt to restore it. The interaction between the Gunas generates energy currents from which the five elements of the universe are created: space, air, fire, water, earth. They are the basis of the evolution of the universe.

Ayurveda believes that man is a microcosm of the universe. All that exist in the universe exist in man. Therefore the five elements are found on an individual level in human body and constitute all aspects of one’s personality: physical, vital, mental, psychic and spiritual.

Ayurveda sums up the five elements in “Tridosha”, three humors:

1- Vata composed by space and air

2- Pitta composed by fire and water

3- Kapha composed by water and earth

Each human possesses a certain amount of doshas that define that person’s temperament and humor. This constitution or individual Prakriti is determined at conception and should stay unchanged during the entire span of life.

Ayurveda stresses to maintain a harmonious balance between the three doshas. The increase or decrease of one of them causes illness and disorder.

Ayurvedic massage is one of the means among others to maintain order and eliminate disorder of the doshas. It must be given considering the nature and characteristics of the individual. Depending on each disorder and each individual temperament, different massages are given and various natural or medicinal oils are used. These massages contribute to harmonize Vata, Pitta and Kapha in the body, to eliminate muscular and nervous tensions, to improve the quality of skin and circulation, to increase vital energy, “Prana”, to provide relaxation and to bring well-being.

In India massage is part of a healthy life starting at birth and continuing during lifetime.
